

to those who served with her and worked as diligently toward definite goals, and that I shall do now. It is true that she could not have accomplished these things alone -- cooperation and concerted effort means a great deal to ultimate success, but good leadership is vitally important too. And as we have been blessed with good leadership. We have had it and are having it now and it appears that good leadership will be in readiness for us for several years to come. We have but to call on it when we need it.

Here are the names of our current officers and the office they hold followed by a list of our past-presidents and the years they served.

Now that I am about to mention some of the outstanding material gains that the P.T.A. has been instrumental in financing, a word of explanation is necessary relative to the sizable difference in the value of the projects. Most of those mentioned will have been purchased during the past ten years and I do not mean to be unfair by not mentioning those endeavors previous to that time. In all due respect and sincere appreciation we feel their contributions were just as important and as representative of great sacrifices and concerted efforts as those of the present day. However, records are not as complete on these previous endeavors as on the recent ones. The
